Local Observer May Have Seen Rocket Blast

A local observer may have seen a rocket launching Monday night. The TIMES-VIRGINIAN received a report that a motorist traveling in the Hisburg area sighted a light shining in the sky that appeared to be a plane with landing lights on but with a trail of smoke behind it. The object was "moving slowly" but a mushroom cloud of smoke behind it widened out and then narrowed. The object's light went out – then reappeared and then disappeared into the clouds.

This occurred about the same time as the report of the launching of the largest space telescope ever launched which apparently failed to reach orbit Monday night at Cape Kennedy, ruining a $98.5 million experiment.

The National Aeroutics and Space Administration reported the Orbiting Astronomical Observatory (OAO 3) "apparently did not achieve orbit. We likely had a problem, but we do not know what it is."

New York City officials set the average speed of a horse drawn vehicle in 1970 at 11.5 m.p.h.

Drinkard-Ford Collecting For Firemen's Gift

It's Christmas gift time again – and while you're making out that shopping list, please include the firemen of Appomattox who help out all year long to fight fires and prevent property damage.

As in years past, Paul Drinkard of Appomattox is out collecting funds to provide the volunteer firemen of Appomattox with a Christmas bonus. This year he has a helper, James R. Ford, the town policeman. They follow in the tradition of the late Ewen T. Mitchell who for a number of years prior to his death, went around town with a cigar box, collecting dollars for the firemen.
